The Flag House is a two-and-one-half story Federal corner row house of salmon brick laid in Flemish bond. Three bays wide, it has a black slate hipped roof and a chimney on the left side. Apparently, built in 1793 and added to in 1820, the house has a living room, dining room-kitchen and hall on the first floor, two bedrooms on the second and servants' quarters on the third.

Mary Young Pickersgill bought the house in 1820, after renting it for thirteen years. Almost immediately after acquiring the property, Mrs. Pickersgill added a two story wing in the rear (a kitchen on the ground floor and a boarder's room on the second). She lived in this house until her death in 1857, and it remained in the family until 1864. During the next six decades, the house changed hands frequently and served a variety of purposes, including those of saloon and warehouse. Alterations included the construction of a display window in front.

The City of Baltimore purchased the building in 1929, and since that time it has been maintained as an historic building. One of the first things the city did was to remove the storefront window and restore the original facade on the Pratt Street side. Other restoration work included reconstruction of a partition between the dining room and living room. Workmen added steel beams under the first floor for greater strength. The staircase and two of the six mantels in the house are original.

In 1953 the city erected a one-and-one-half story dependency building behind the main house. The new building, built in the same style, conforms well with the Flag House and is connected to it by a covered breezeway. Present called the 1812 Museum, the building contains, on the first floor, two rooms in which are placed momentoes of the War of 1812 that had originally been displayed in the Flag House. Located on the second floor are the offices of the Star-Spangled Banner Flag House Association, Incorporated. This building is included in the landmark.

Boundary Information and Justification

The Star-Spangled Banner Flag House sits on a lot located at 844 East Pratt Street and faces south. Beginning at the point of intersection of East Pratt and Albemarle Streets proceed due north along the western side of Albemarle Street to a point of intersection with Granby Street; thence proceed west along the southern side of Granby Street to a point of intersection with Slimmers Alley; thence proceed south along the eastern side of Slimmers Alley to a point of intersection with East Pratt Street; thence east along the northern side of East Pratt Street to the point of origin. An iron fence with interposing brick columns completely surrounds this property, and runs parellel to each street. Located in a garden on the west side of the house is a memorial map of the Continental United States composed of stones from each of the then 48 states.
